SAFETY FIRST: WHAT TO DO IF YOU SUSPECT A GAS LEAK

Gas leaks are rare, but when they do occur, it's important to know how to respond in a safe manner. Sometimes there are clear signs of a leak; you may see blowing debris, dying vegetation, or, in a wet area, water bubbling. You may also smell rotten eggs or hear a hissing sound. But whatever the indication, if you do suspect a gas leak, it's essential to act quickly:

- 1 Immediately leave the area or building and get to a safe distance (at least 300 feet away).
- 2 Do not try to turn off your gas meter.
- 3 Warn others to stay away from the area.
- 4 Once at a safe distance, call 9-1-1. Emergency responders and the utility company will inspect and secure the area.
